

The following are screenshots from a BuzzFeed article about Gloria Steinem and others who share their abortion stories. You can see the original article at <https://www.buzzfeednews.com/article/gabrielsanchez/this-powerful-photo-series-asks-women-to-talk-about-their> (scroll down to the fifth story to see Gloria's bio and photo)

This Powerful Photo Series Asks Women To Talk About Their Abortions

"I think once you see yourself in someone else's shoes, that's when things start to change."

Gabriel H. Sanchez
BuzzFeed News Photo Essay Editor

Posted on May 21, 2019, at 5:52 p.m. ET

Tara Todras-Whitehill / Vignette

Gloria Steinem, 71, entered the feminist movement the day she covered the Redstockings abortion speakout for New York magazine, and finally owned the abortion she had had several years earlier. She describes her abortion as the first time she acted in her own life, rather than let things happen to her. She had her abortion when she was 22. Gloria went on to found several pro-abortion rights organizations, including Voters for Choice and Ms. Magazine and considers reproductive freedom to be the most significant contribution of second-wave feminism.