

Girl Scouts partnered in post-election protests in New York City against President-elect Trump:

<http://licpost.com/van-bramer-plans-march-across-queensboro-bridge-to-protest-trumps-values>
(screenshot provided below - see link for full article)

Also see <http://licpost.com/more-than-500-turn-out-for-van-bramers-community-speak-out-attendees-denounce-trump-policies> with Girl Scouts listed as a participating organization near the bottom of the article.

licpost.com/van-bramer-plans-march-across-queensboro-bridge-to-protest-trumps-values

The march on Saturday is the second in two events Van Bramer is hosting in response to the election.

He is also hosting a "Community Speak Out" tonight at Sunnyside Community Services at 6 p.m. to bring together community members and various community and activist organizations to speak about the election results and possible actions to take in response.

Organizations including Planned Parenthood, Woodside on the Move, Make the Road New York, various LGBTQ and immigrant groups, and about a dozen more will gather tonight at the event, and Van Bramer said that he hopes it will connect people with ways to channel their feelings about the election in to action.

"We will come together in Western Queens to share ideas on how to be effective in our resistance. And we've brought together some groups representing the people most clearly and directly under assault," Van Bramer wrote in the statement.

"And on Saturday, we'll march over the Queensboro Bridge from the place Trump once called home to remind him that diversity makes us stronger. He may have been raised in Queens but he isn't from here anymore," he added.

Organizations included in the event tonight are:

-Planned Parenthood of New York City

-Girl Scouts of Greater New York

-Make the Road New York